An Amazing Trip

Pam has just arrived home after a long vacation. She has invited her friend, Nancy, over for coffee. She is telling her all about the vacation.

"I have been to the most beautiful island," Pam explains as she heats up the coffee. "It was incredible!"

"That is wonderful," Nancy says. "Have you enjoyed the trip, then? I hope it was relaxing." She takes the cup of coffee from Pam and puts it on the kitchen counter.

"I cannot stop thinking about it! I have done so many amazing things!" Pam replies. She gives Nancy a spoon.

"Wow, the trip has really put you in a good mood!" Nancy says, mixing her coffee with the spoon. "Tell me more about it."

"Well, for one thing, I have learned to scuba dive!" Pam announces.

Nancy drops her spoon in surprise. "Really? But you have always been afraid to swim!"

"I guess I have stopped being afraid," Pam replies, laughing.

"That is great," Nancy says. "Well, what else have you learned?"

"Oh, that is all," Pam answers. "But I have become interested in dancing, and I have made lots of friends!"

"Dancing? You have never danced before!" Nancy thinks maybe her ears are not working correctly. "This trip has made some big changes in your life!"

"Yes, it has been a great experience," Pam answers.

"I am really happy for you," Nancy says. "So, now that you have had your amazing vacation, will you go back to work on Monday?"

"Oh, no!" Pam replies. "I have had lots of fun, but I am tired! I have taken some more days off from work. I need a vacation from my vacation!"
