

Text :

Many species are under the threat of extinction because of human activities . Hunters have always killed animals for their ivory , oil and skins . Others have been killed because they attack the farmer's animals . So , the total animal's number has been declined .

Farmers and industrialists in South America like Brazil have cut down a large section of Amazon forests and built many foctories and houses . As a result , birds and animals have lost their habitat .

People have polluted the oceans . They have thrown chemical products and oil into seas . So , aquatic species have been died .

That's why governments have decided to establish species parks and zoos to protect these species from danger and live in security .
